

A BOTTLE OF WHISKEY A DAY

BASIS OF INEBRIETY CHARGE AGAINST LIEUT. BALLARD.

Other Officers Drank Only Half a Pint—A Quart Induced Loss of Memory, It Is Charged—Had Memory Enough to Pay His Canteen Bills, Defence Says.

It was brought out at the second day of the court-martial of Lieut. W. W. Ballard, Jr., commander of the Fifth Company, Coast Artillery, held at the Army Building yesterday that the accused for several months, beginning June last, had consumed a minimum of thirty-three bottles of whiskey each month, and that in one month he had used up thirty-eight bottles. The bottles ran five to the gallon. Lieut. John Berry, formerly of Lieut. Ballard's company, gave this testimony and also declared that the canteen bill of the accused at the officers' club was about four and a half times as much as that of the average officer. He made the estimate by averaging the monthly bill of ten members of the company at the time in question.

Lieut. Ballard showed signs of nervousness and fatigue during the long hearing of yesterday. He was in full uniform, as prescribed by regulations, and made notes as various witnesses were called. He was accompanied to the trial room by Edwin D. Webb, his civilian counsel, and Capt. Kessler of the district commander's staff, Coast Artillery, the associate and military counsel.

Quartermaster-Sergeant Fenwick Muir, who kept an account of the company funds and testified on Monday, was recalled by Capt. William T. Johnston, judge advocate, and asked about expenditures from the funds. He was shown two checks for $24.70 each for repairs to a pool table in the officers' club. The witness said that the fact that two checks were made out for the same amount would indicate that Ballard had paid the bill twice.

Capt. Johnston asked Muir if the inference might not be that the money of one of them had gone into the hands of Lieut. Ballard and that only one had been used for paying for the repairs on the pool table.

"It seems that it might so be inferred," the witness answered.

Lieut. Berry said that Lieut. Ballard took his whiskey by the glassful and became so notorious for inebriety that other members of the company refused to drink with him. Lieut. Berry said, had gone to the place where he kept his bottle at the officers' club at various hours in the night. Lieut. Berry added that he had seen him there on numerous occasions at midnight and as early as 4 o'clock in the morning. Lieut. Ballard, he said, had shown signs of loss of his faculties and had forgotten simple firing commands at the time.

He asked the same questions repeatedly, said Lieut. Berry, "and once I timed him. In between seven and eight minutes he asked me the same question as to the unit to wear the next day. At that time he came around attired in improper uniform. He declared that I had not told him what to wear. His legs were shaky and he was unsteady."

About the time he turned up at the club at 4 o'clock in the morning, inquired Lawyer Webb, "was he fully dressed?"

"He was fully dressed," the reply. "At the time Lieut. Ballard asked you about the proper uniform so many times, about the same day, did he not pay you a bill of $10?" asked Capt. Johnston.

"He did," it was an officers' club bill. "How many times did you have to ask him for it?"

"Once," the reply. "Should say that was a pretty fair exhibition of memory," was Capt. Johnston's reply, "that an officer of his pay should have to be reminded only once to produce one hundred and twenty-five dollars. On such occasions as that most anybody's memory is liable to be a little shaky."

The reply drew a smile from Col. Walter H. Berry, who presided over the court. The other officers joined in.

"And how many duns did it take to get the bill of $120 that Lieut. Ballard owed the club?" asked Lieut. Ballard.

"Two," was the reply, "but I had to put up a pretty strong talk."

"Only two," said Capt. Johnston. "Not bad, and it goes to show that Lieut. Ballard's memory was not hopelessly gone."

"I never had to dun anybody else twice," said Lieut. Berry.

"Had anybody else such bills?"

"No."

"Wouldn't the mere fact of his keeping tanked up the way you say account for most of the peculiarities you have testified to?" asked Johnston.

From the standpoint of a layman I should say "yes,"

"In your opinion was the accused able to tell right from wrong?" the questioner put to him.

Lieut. Berry thought himself incompetent to answer.

Was there anything in the period of his peculiarities, Lieut. Berry was asked, that the accused was conscious that he would be punished if he lied or cheated or broke the common law at the post?" asked Johnston.

Lieut. Berry thought that he was not able to tell. Capt. Johnston demanded an answer and called upon Col. Howe. The latter ordered the court-martial cleared while the members of the court-martial consulted upon the propriety of the question. Berry was ordered to answer, afterward, to the best of his ability.

"I would say in the absence of any evidence to prove that he was not conscious of punishment that he did know that he might be punished," Berry answered.

Commissioner Sergeant William A. Tobin testified that he had cashed a check for $50 for Lieut. Ballard. The check came back marked "No funds." Ballard promised to settle. He gave no explanation, but after a time made good on the check.

Major Charles E. Woodruff of the Medical Corps, Post Surgeon at Fort Wadsworth, testified that on August 30 at 11 o'clock in the morning he examined Lieut. Ballard and that the patient was under the influence of alcohol.

"He was dazed. I doubt if he could have understood an order," said Major Woodruff. "He had no idea of the consequences of his actions. He was not in a deliberative state. He was not under the influence of liquor, in my opinion, to be irresponsible."

Major Woodruff defined Lieut. Ballard as an alcoholic, one physically and mentally damaged by overindulgence. Capt. Johnston framed a long hypothetical question bearing on Lieut. Ballard's condition at the time of his "peculiarities" and asked Major Woodruff if he was responsible to form a deliberation. But he was not under the influence of liquor, in my opinion, to be irresponsible."

"Did you ever hear of Lieut. Ballard rubbing the ether off a $10 bill and passing it for a $1 denomination?"

Major Woodruff had not. He said that the excessive use of alcohol had the effect of lessening not only brain powers but all powers.

ADIRONDACK FIRES OUT.

Main Steps Them—Persons Missing—Loss Problematical.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The Adirondack forest fires have been stopped effectively by the downpour of rain which started late yesterday and continued intermittently to-day. To-night, however, received from Tupper Lake, Massena, Berne and other points, reports that all danger is now past and that those who suffered by the flames are busy figuring up their losses.

Estimates of the total damage done by the fires are simply out of the question. The area is one of great distances and the property values are matters of dispute.

As regards the matter of loss of life it is impossible as yet to say definitely whether any persons have perished. The persons who were reported missing in the vicinity of Long Lake West and Tupper Lake are as yet unaccounted for.

ALBANY, Sept. 29.—Col. J. S. Whipple, State Engineer, and General Cummings, announced to-day that his reports from the Adirondacks were to the effect that there had been a three-hour rain at all sections during the night and that the fires were under control.

He thought from his information received from Col. W. F. Fox, State Superintendent of Forests, who is at Saranac Lake, that the fires were under control.

Several others are reported missing.

BERNARD JUDGE TOWED HERE.

Chief Justice Henry Cowper Gollan of the Supreme Court of Nevada took out a license at the City Hall yesterday to marry Miss Marie Louise Norris, daughter of James Nelson Norris of St. Louis. Paul Shipman Andrews, a son of Judge Andrews of Syracuse, is to be the best man.

PINNED IN ELEVATOR SHAFT.

Firemen With Axes Could Not Chop Him Out in Time to Save Life.

Harry Galpin, owner of the apartment house at 57 West Fifty-seventh street, while passing along the ground floor hall of the house yesterday afternoon, heard screams coming from the second floor. He ran up to see what was wrong, and found Harry P. Lockwood, the colored elevator boy, who lives at 1522 Bergen street, Brooklyn, wedged in between the elevator and the floor. Galpin tried to get the boy loose, but could not and sent in a call for an ambulance.

Dr. Lane came from the Lower Hospital. Policeman Greenbaum, who had come in from the street, also tried his hand, and then sent around to the quarters of Engineer, who had secured firemen, who brought along axes.

The boy was growing weaker by this time and Dr. Lane gave him stimulants. The firemen could not get at the boy from the elevator shaft, and he was cut off from the inside of the elevator shaft. After an hour's work they succeeded in getting the boy out, but he died shortly after reaching the hospital.

Leaves Nothing by Will to Boy Who Clung to His Mother.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—L. D. Carter, son of the late Leslie Carter, was cut off without a penny in the will of his father, which was probated to-day.

"So long as he remains under his mother's influence I do not desire, either directly or indirectly, to aid him," the will continues. "If he comes to understand the serious nature of his error and separates himself from his mother I do not object to my brother and sister, or either of them, acting freely in their own judgment, treating him as they would have gladly done if he had been loyal and dutiful toward me."

In the will, which disposes of an estate valued at $175,000, Mr. Carter appoints his sister, Helen Leslie Carter, and Charles E. Ling, both of Chicago, as executors.

He bequeaths the entire fortune equally to his brother Ernest of New York and his sister Helen.

The son announced his intention of contesting the will.

I WAS SPANKED, WIFE SAYS

NO WITNESSES AND MRS. STODDARD IS SORRY—AND GLAD.

Her Charges Lose Some of Their Weight in Court, but That Alleged Affinity Business, of Which There Was Talk, She Explains Fully—Husband Paroled.

That higher, finer sort of love which of late has grown so popular—that sort of love which is all mixed up with "soul mates," "affinities," "soul kisses," etc.—got tangled up with less ethereal things yesterday when Mrs. Ella St. Claire Stoddard accused her husband, Charles Burton Stoddard, of taking her over his knee the day before and spanking her good and plenty.

Mrs. Stoddard's accusations against her husband before Magistrate Geismar in the Adams street court, Brooklyn, yesterday lost some of their weight when she had to admit that she had no witnesses to prove her spanking charges.

Her chagrin, then, however, was more than counterbalanced when she remembered that no one had been on hand to see her spanked.

Charles Burton Stoddard is a tall, dark, good looking man who gives one the impression that he could hand out a spanking which in every detail would be quite as good as those that mother used to make.

Mrs. Stoddard is a little person, good looking and a particularly excellent talker. Her husband, who is first officer of the Ward Line, is a first officer of the Ward Line.

More about Spanish plot.

Hungarian Police Get Anarchists With Teletype Drawings of Explosive Machines.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 29.—The police arrested two anarchists at a hotel here to-day. They were believed to be concerned in the plot against the king of Spain, Alfonso, of which the Hungarian police gave the Hungarian authorities warning last week.

One of the prisoners was an anarchist of the name of Bakoff and well known to the police. The other gave the name of Robinson.

They had with them a number of technical drawings of explosive implements. Yesterday it was declared in France that the plot was a mere dream of the police and the anarchist under arrest was released.

ARMY ACCUSATIONS FALSE.

HAVANA, Sept. 29.—The investigation of the charges made by the Diario Espanol against the army has been completed. The accusations included wholesale smuggling by means of army transports.

The report was submitted to the Audencia to-day. It is understood that the investigating judge found all the allegations false. If this is the editor of the paper will be prosecuted for libel in accordance with Gov. Magallon's order for the investigation.

ALBERT MAIGNAN DEAD.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Albert Maignan, the historical painter, died to-day.

One of his most famous paintings, "The Attack Upon Pope Boniface VIII," is in the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

Albert Maignan was born at Beaumont, Sarthe, France, on December 15, 1844. He studied under Noel and Luminier, and received a first class medal at the Salon of 1879 and the Cross of the Legion of Honor in 1883. Obituary Notes.

Dr. William J. Eckoff, educator and author, died in the German Hospital at Newark yesterday, following an operation for appendicitis last Saturday. Dr. Eckoff was born in Hamburg, Germany, on March 15, 1840. He was graduated from the University of Halle in 1863, and received the degree of doctor of medicine from the University of Halle in 1863. He was professor of physiology at the University of Halle from 1863 to 1865, and became principal of the South Sixteenth street public school. For the past several years he has been principal of a public school. He is survived by his wife.

James Hogan, who for more than fifty years was well known in the tobacco trade, having been the superintendent first of the Admiral Cigarette Company and then of the H. H. Buckner Company, died to-day in his seventieth year at his home, 601 Bedford avenue, Williamsburg, Brooklyn. He was a native of Ireland and was thought to have hastened his death, the cause of which was heart disease. He was born in New York and settled in Williamsburg forty years ago. He leaves two daughters and four sons.

When Bishop Sabin's first wife died in Washington last May, he declared that she had really died three weeks before he had made the announcement and that by prayer and faith he had brought her back to life. Then his wife reproached him, he said, for bringing her from the eternal kingdom where all was beautiful, and he told her he could not live without her.

"She was my all, my life, the fulfillment of my existence," the Bishop explained. "We were not merely wedded; our souls, hearts and minds were wedded. I prayed to heaven not to take her from me."

Bishop Fabin is 66 years old; his present wife is 25. She was Miss Pauline Beckman of Washington and was his private secretary.

DALAI LAMA IN PEKIN.

Lodged in the Yellow Palace With Imperial Honors—Brought Many Gifts.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. PEKIN, Sept. 29.—The Dalai Lama of Tibet, head of the Buddhist faith, who has been a wanderer in northern China ever since he fled from the British invasion of Tibet four or five years ago, living at the expense of the Chinese authorities and refusing their earnest requests to return to Lhasa, arrived here with his suite to-day on two special trains from Tai-yun-fu, which he left on September 27.

It was his first railway journey and the Chinese Governor at Tai-yun-fu had hard work to induce him to make it. He wanted to proceed to Peking in the old style, in a string of sedan chairs, but the expense of such a cavalcade, with his numerous retinue, was more than the Chinese authorities would stand.

The Dalai Lama was welcomed on his arrival in Peking by a number of Chinese high officers in a procession of barbaric magnificence headed by a brass band. Nuisance as he is, the Chinese must be civil to him, as to incur his hostility would greatly hamper them in their plans to secure the political mastery of Tibet.

He was carried in a chair of yellow, the Chinese imperial color, to the Yellow Palace, where he is to reside for the present. He brought with him a retinue of 400 lamas and servants.

There were also 300 camels and 400 ponies. He brought six carloads of presents for the Chinese imperial court.

SAW MOTHER KILLED IN BED

FOUR-YEAR-OLD BOY ONLY WITNESS OF A MURDER.

It Was "Uncle Bob," He Says, Shot Mrs. Amelia Roach. She Lay Asleep Beside Her Child. Although His "Uncle Bob" Recently Got Religion.

A very little boy—his name is Bertram Roach and he is 4 years old—lay in bed next to his sleeping baby sister Agatha yesterday morning and saw his mother, Mrs. Amelia Roach, shot dead as she was lying beside him. Later this very little boy had to tell a lot of men in blue coats with brass buttons how he saw that his Uncle Bob came in when there was little light through the curtains and leaned over the bed and pointed with his finger at his mother; how there was a big noise, and how his mother lay very quiet after that while the smoke in the room went round and round the bedposts.

The murder was done in a bedroom on the third floor of an apartment house at 401 West Fifty-third street a few minutes after 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Adding to what they learned from little Bertram the talk of others who lived in the house, detectives set out to find Uncle Bob, who is Robert Francis Wood.

Amelia Roach was left a widow a little less than a year ago. She was a native of St. Elizabeth, in the Parish of St. Joseph, on the island of Barbados, and she married Constance Roach, who was on the police force of Port of Spain, Trinidad. The Trinidad policeman brought his wife, his son and daughter up to New York, hoping to get a position on the New York police force. He died of spinal meningitis a short time after he arrived here, and his wife had to become a chambermaid in the Hotel St. Paul, at Sixtieth street and Columbus avenue.

She lived with her sister, Mrs. Joseph McConney, and the family of her sister, which included her husband, two brothers of McConney and their families. Mrs. Roach earned enough to support herself and her two children.

A little over a month ago Mrs. Roach's uncle, Wood, who had been working on a farm in New Jersey, the location of which is known to the police, came over and took up his residence in the same apartment with the McConneys. He got a job as house man for the Hotel Wolcott, 4 West Thirty-fourth street.

The members of the McConney family who were examined yesterday said that immediately upon the arrival of this Robert Wood in the household he began to pay offensive attentions to Mrs. Roach. He went into her bedroom a few days ago while she was dressing herself and threatened her that if she did not accept his love he would kill her.

At that time, the McConneys said, Mrs. Roach tried to shame him for his conduct and later the two were quarreling and her brother-in-law of the conversation that had passed between herself and her uncle. Wood himself talked somewhat wildly to the other members of the family. He said that he had been converted by the Salvation Army and that he had subdued the devil that was in him by a hard fight.

Yesterday morning, according to the McConneys, Wood left the room which he occupied in the McConney household before any of the others were awake. Mrs. McConney heard two shots and the screams of the children coming from her sister's room. Others heard Mrs. McConney scream "My God, Uncle Bob, what have you done?" as she ran into Mrs. Roach's room.

By the side of her two scared children with a bullet wound in the right temple and another just above the right ear. The bullet had been directed so close to her head that powder burns seared both wounds. It was evident that Mrs. Roach had been asleep when shot.

James Curran, a waiter at the MacLure, where Mrs. Roach lodged in the same house, heard the shots and hurried into the hall. He saw in the dim light a man whom he thought to be Robert Wood, believing that there had been an accident and that the man he took to be Wood was going for a doctor, did not attempt to stop him.

Although the police of the West Forty-seventh street station arrested Mrs. Joseph McConney and Curran, the waiter as material witnesses, they were both released by Coroner Dooley when he had heard their stories. Yesterday afternoon and all of last night men under Capt. Carey of the Homicide Bureau were out in Manhattan and in New Jersey scouting for Wood. A general alarm for his arrest was sent out by Headquarters.

WANT NO BANK GUARANTY.

Savings Section of Bankers Association Adopts Resolution in Opposition.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 29.—Ex-Gov. Herriek of Ohio introduced the following in the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association convention to-day and it was adopted after a lively discussion:

"Whereas, as guaranty of bank deposits is a species of paternalism and socialism, it would tend to encourage speculation and an undue expansion of credit; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we enter the most solemn protest against the enactment into law, either by State or nation, of any principle or law which would encourage and so revolutionary in character."

Not satisfied with this, several members spoke in favor of the savings bank section going on record before the main body, and offered a motion to the effect that the report of the committee on postal savings banks should be sent over as expressions of the sentiments of the smaller body.

This was passed, and Gov. Herriek asked that his resolution should also go before the main body, and this was carried unanimously.

Making no recommendations regarding currency reform and after having adopted a very conservative report, which was submitted to a meeting of the executive council this afternoon, the currency committee appointed by the last convention of the association completed its labors this morning. The report of the committee is merely a review of what the commission has accomplished and any action by the convention will be taken from the facts presented and not on the initiative of the commission.
